THE WADSWORTH FAMILY PAPERS

Scope of the Collection

The Wadsworth Family Papers are a collection of over 300 land maps and 145 shelf feet of family and business correspondence, account books, deeds, leases and vouchers from the family land offices in Geneseo, New York. These papers are the record of one of the longest unbroken land tenures by an American family, and cover the years from 1790 to the early twentieth century.

Jeremiah Wadsworth (1743-1804) of Hartford, Connecticut was one of the financiers of the American Revolution. At the end of the war, he, like many other contemporaries, bought land in Western New York State as an investment. His holdings lay mainly on the east bank of the Genesee River, between Geneseo and Rochester, in what was known as Phelps and Gorham's Purchase. Also, like many others, he did not occupy the land himself, but sent agents to administer or sell the holdings. In the case of Jeremiah, he convinced his two nephews, William Wadsworth (1761-1833) and James Wadsworth (1768-1844) to leave the comforts of Durham, Connecticut and settle in this wilderness. His persuasion was to offer them the chance to buy some of the choicest land at cost. In return, they were to oversee the sale of the rest of his holdings. William oversaw the development of the family farm, and James administered the land sales and leases.

William, who never married, was the sole year round resident in the first decade. James preferred to winter in more comfortable situations until after his marriage in 1804. At times he traveled in Europe, where he met and agreed to be agent for other landholders in the area, such as Sir William Pulteney from England and the Six family of the Hague. James' marriage produced three daughters and two sons. Daughter Elizabeth (1815-1851) was James' housekeeper and hostess for his guests after the death of his wife in 1831. In 1841, James divided his estate and responsibility for land management between his two sons, William Wolcott Wadsworth (1810-1852) and James Samuel Wadsworth (1807-1864).

This division of lands and responsibilities is reflected in the collection in important ways. James S. Wadsworth opened a land office at Number 1 Main Street to administer his part of the estate, and William Wolcott Wadsworth took over the Homestead office for management of his share of the holdings. When descendants of the two branches of the family gave the papers to Milne Library, it was stipulated that the papers should not be combined. In the Wadsworth Room, the collections from the Homestead Office are shelved on the right as one enters, the papers

Books and registers that were originally found together in the Homestead Office in numerical sequence were separated, and researchers must use materials in both collections for continuity in some subject areas. The same situation applies to the Map Collection. Each office housed the maps that applied to its specific holdings. In the map case, there are two separate collections alphabetized by township name. It may be necessary to search both collections for the complete picture.

Three other events impacted the collection as it now stands. The first was the family decision to pack up most of the records from 1790 to 1838 and put them in storage. They have not been located by anyone in recent years, and may have been destroyed in one of the numerous barn fires that plagued the family from time to time. However, one important letter book remains from the second decade of the nineteenth century, and a collection of early family papers was given to the Library of Congress by the descendants of General James S. Wadsworth. These are available on microfilm in Milne Library. Orsamus Turner in his history of Phelps and Gorham's Purchase quotes from missing early records that he had read.

The other two events were the premature deaths of both of James' Wadsworth's sons and heirs. William Wolcott died in 1851 after falling on ice. He left his wife Emmeline and two very young sons, William Austin Wadsworth (1847-1918), and Herbert Wadsworth (1851-1930) as heirs to his estate. Emmeline was not overly fond of living in Geneseo, and after her husband's death spent more and more time in Boston near her family and friends in the arts and letters. She was travelling in Europe when the Civil War broke out. She turned over all the business matter to clerks, housekeepers, and lawyers in Geneseo and Boston for almost twenty years.

General James S. Wadsworth was killed in the Civil War Battle of the Wilderness in 1864. His eldest son, James Wolcott Wadsworth was only 18, so the affairs at Number 1 Main Street were also administered by clerks and attorneys for some years. It may be helpful for one to remember that the proprietors of the Homestead were all named William after father James' death in 1844, and the proprietors at Number 1 Main Street were all named James. There was only one brief exception. General James' son Craig Wharton Wadsworth (1841-1872) owned the Homestead for two year ~~1870-1871~~, but because of ill health, he sold it back to William Wolcott's son William Austin Wadsworth. William's mother Emmeline returned to Geneseo to live with him at the Homestead after it had been moved back from the street and remodeled around 1875.

Both William Wolcott and James S. Wadsworth had invested in extensive land holdings in Ohio and Michigan. part of the correspondence concerns these lands and the agents who administered them. There are also photo albums containing pictures taken by Herbert's wife Martha Blow Wadsworth (1864-1934). Both branches of the family were involved in local, State and national politics. William Austin Wadsworth (1847-1918) was a friend and comrade in arms of Theodore Roosevelt and served him when he was Governor in Albany, but he would not leave Geneseo for Washington. His son William Perkins Wadsworth (1906-1982) also elected to remain in Geneseo and local politics. However, James Wolcott Wadsworth (1846-1926) was a Congressman; his son James Wolcott, Jr. (1877-1952) was a Senator; and his grandson James Jeremiah Wadsworth (1905-1984) was Ambassador to the United Nations.

This has been an overview of the collection. A more detailed description follows in the registers for various facets of the collection. If one wishes to read a further account of the Wadsworth family, see the chapter entitled "The Wadsworths of Geneseo" in Irene Beale's book "Genesee Valley People." It is followed by a good bibliography of other sources.

Persons Who Worked for the Wadsworths as Farm or Day Laborers

These lists of persons hired to work on the Wadsworth farms have been compiled for the years 1831-1842 from the five ledgers on Shelf 3. One book is not wrapped. The others are in the box labeled AW1. One small book contains both a list and a ledger of accounts with workers. Other books have a list at the beginning and then the managers diary of work assignments for the period, and one book was used as a payroll, the workers being asked to sign it every time they were payed for any work. The notes on work assignments are like a calendar and narrative of what happened on a Wadsworth farm.

In the books, some signatures are illegible, while others were written in by the clerk beside the persons "mark," usually an "x." If a person wishes to examine the illegible signatures they may recognize them from family papers. Some were in German script.

Comparing the lists one may find the name of a worker who worked for the whole decade. Others were no doubt transients and signed on for a few months or just the haying season. Just as census takers misspelled names, the farm managers wrote some of them as they heard them and not perhaps as they were spelled.

Farm labor did not usually live on the Wadsworth farms except on the flats, where there was for a time a dormitory and boarding house for single workers. The women who worked at the boarding house are also included in these lists. One very good reason for no housing for families on the flats was the annual flooding that occurred every year until the Mt. Morris Dam was built around 1950. Working men in the Genesee Valley lived in the villages and on high ground. They went out to work the farm land in the valley much as was the custom in Europe. Uninformed travelers, sometimes criticized the Wadsworths for practicing a form of peonage in this regard, when they saw no family housing on the flats.

William Wadsworth (1761-183) was notorious for being a hard boss. When an acquaintance asked his brother James to take on a son and teach him farming, James discouraged the gentleman of any such notion, and advised him to send the boy elsewhere. William had died by the time these lists were made, but the farm managers, no doubt, carried on the work much as their former boss had done. His nephews William Wolcott and James S., who took over management of the farms in the following years, were praised by those who knew them for their enlightened and scientific farm practices. They were admirers of farm practices in Scotland and adopted some Scottish ways, such as "corn rent," payment with part of one's crop.

Genealogists are often interested in proving that an ancestor was a tenant on a Wadsworth farm. Searching the core collection and other documents listed on the previous page can be tedious. There are in the first three contract boxes blue sheets that have the names of the tenants listed in calendars. Except for a very few leases as early as 1814, these records cover the 1830's and 1840's. Beginning in box C4 for 1852 and through and including the year 1860, there are folders entitle "Cash and Wheat Rents." These documents list the tenants and the farm or portion of farm which they rented in this decade.

The tenants in all these guides are listed by townships, in the immediate Genesee Region. The majority of rented lands were in Avon. In the early years the Wadsworths issued long term lease agreements. However, after 1838, most every lease is for one year. The family also allowed renters to pay part of their bill in wheat which they would deliver to a Wadsworth mill for credit. This was known as the "corn rent, a practice they learned about from friends in Scotland"

The next few pages in this Overview include a copy of a typical lease, and a copy of the list of renters for the year 1859, as an example of what you may expect to find in the "Cash and Wheat Rents" folders.

This Lease is forfeited if assigned without Lessor's consent in writing.

and that they will not, without the consent in writing of the said Lessor, pull down or remove any building or fences, or suffer others to do the same, or assign or demise, or under-let for any term of time whatever, the whole or any part of said demised premises, that they will not sow wheat after wheat without some intervening crop; that they will not suffer their hogs to run at large without consent of Lessor, in writing, and that they will not feed or suffer to be fed the incoming crop of cloverlay without the written consent of Lessor. It is also understood that there are no verbal agreements, in relation to any of the matters contained in this lease.

ARTICLE 4. [Wood and Timber.] The said Lessees agree not to cut, destroy or remove, or suffer others to destroy, cut or remove, any trees, wood or timber from the said demised premises, except as is herein otherwise provided:—They also agree to set apart all the timbered land as a wood lot, to comprise the most suitable piece of timbered land on the premises, and on which they shall not cut or destroy, or suffer others to cut or destroy any trees, wood or timber of any kind:—The Lessees further agree to pay for any wood or timber which may be cut or removed from the premises, by whomsoever cut or removed, the full value thereof, as it may be estimated by the agent of the Lessor:—Lessees are not to cut green trees, or valuable fencing or building timber in any case for fuel, nor to cut green trees for fencing or building purposes except under the direction of Lessors agent.

ARTICLE 5. [Fences.] The said Lessees agree, within nine months from the commencement of the said term, to make all fences on said demised premises eight rails high, and to relay and set over, putting one new rail at the bottom of each pannel or length, one eighth part of all the fences thereon, and to make all the fences relaid seven feet worm, eight rails high, of good sized split oak or black ash timber, with the corners laid on stone, or large split oak or black ash blocks. And the said Lessees agree that they will well and sufficiently repair, and keep constantly in good repair, all the fences now, or hereafter to be, on said farm, and that the fences shall be on the first day of March next, eight rails high, and well righted up as aforesaid: Lessees agree to erect convenient gates and bars at all proper places, and keep the same in perfect repair, and that they shall be liable to an action for damages, for every default in relation to fences, gates and bars.

ARTICLE 6. [Taxes.] The said Lessees agree to pay all taxes, ordinary and extraordinary, and also to pay, and discharge, all assessments for high-way labor, that may be imposed in respect to the said premises, during the term of this lease.

ARTICLE 7. [Garden and Fruit Trees.] The said Lessees agree to enclose with a good post and rail, or board fence, a garden on said premises, to contain at least one acre of ground, if not already done; to set out on said farm, in the most proper places, a suitable number of peach, and other fruit trees, and current bushes, and enclose them with a good fence; to put in an orchard on said farm, within one acre from the date hereof, apple trees, or so many as shall with those already planted, amount to that number; to cut the sprouts, prune and take care of all said fruit trees, and as often as any of the fruit trees now planted, or hereafter to be planted on said premises, shall die or be destroyed, to plant other of the same kind in their places, and to enclose with a good post and rail, or board fence, with a convenient gate, a yard adjoining the barn on said farm.

ARTICLE 8. [Clover Seed.] Lessees agree that they will between the 20th of March and the 10th of April in the year 184*7*, stock down with clover, and timothy seeds, sowing six quarts of good clean clover seed, and six quarts of timothy seed, of like quality, on each and every acre, which shall be sowed to wheat on the premises, in the fall ensuing the date hereof; and in case said Lessees shall neglect to stock down as aforesaid all lands sowed to wheat, as is before required, and also all lands sowed with summer crops, in case the same shall be required by this lease to be stocked down, they shall pay to said Lessor two dollars for each and every acre neglected to be stocked down as aforesaid, as stipulated damages. Lessees also agree to set apart at least five acres in the most suitable place for saving clover seed, for the farm and for sale; said clover field to be changed from time to time, by advisement of the agent of Lessor. Lessees also agree that they will by the 15th of April, 184*6*, sow one hundred pounds of Plaster on each and every acre of upland pasture, and also on all lands to be summer fallowed as per bill of rent; and that they will not feed the lands to be summer fallowed until the first of June, 184*6*, and then only with the teams necessary for tilling the farm; and that they shall pay to the Lessor two dollars for each and every acre so fed, contrary to the provisions of this article, as stipulated damages.

ARTICLE 9. [Right of Ingress and Egress.] It is hereby further agreed, that the said Lessor shall have the right, and that the said Lessees shall permit him at all times, during said term, by himself or his agent or agents, to enter into and upon said demised premises and every part thereof, for the purpose of inspecting the same, and the buildings and fences thereon, payable one half on the first day of October, 1847, and the remainder on the first day of March, 1847.

And also as the wheat rent,

110 Bu? One Hundred and Fifty

bushels of good merchantable wheat, to be delivered on or before the first day of August 1847, at such place within ten miles of the premises hereby leased, as said Lessor may direct. In case said Lessees shall make default in delivering said wheat, or any part thereof, as aforesaid, the price thereof shall be estimated at one dollar and twenty-five cents per bushel, and it shall be lawful for the said Lessor to sue, or distrain for the amount thereof, or so much as shall be in arrear, estimating the same as aforesaid.

ARTICLE 3. [General Provisions.] The said Lessees agree that one or more of them shall reside on the said demised premises with a family during the said term, and to cultivate and conduct the same in a proper and farmer-like manner; to commit no waste, nor suffer any to be committed; to feed out on said farm all the hay and other fodder, and to thresh out thereon all grain raised on said premises; to carry out all the manure in and adjoining the barn and stables, and all the chip manure, next autumn and spring, and spread the same, and all the straw produced on said farm, in such fields as shall be most proper and farmer-like; not to break up any old meadow, or old pasture land, without consent of Lessor; to cut and destroy before the first of July, and again before the first of September, yearly, all burdocks, burs, thistles of all kinds, and noxious weeds of every kind, growing or to grow, on said premises; and said Lessees agree to pay said Lessor twelve and a half cents as liquidated damages, for each and every Canada thistle, or burdock that is suffered to go to seed on the premises; and when any Canada thistles are found growing on summer fallows, Lessees agree to plough the same five times between the first of June and first of September, allowing one week at least to intervene between each ploughing; also to cut or cause to be cut as often as may be necessary to prevent going to seed, all Canada thistles growing in the highways running by or through the premises; to cut and destroy all bushes and briars in the corners of fences and elsewhere, in all the pasture, meadow, and arable land included in this lease; to remove from said premises, or burn, or otherwise destroy all old logs, and all stumps which can conveniently be pulled up; and to grub or sprout, twice within a year, with an axe, all the bushes in each improved field on the premises; they are not to destroy, nor suffer to be destroyed, any shade trees; to leave growing on such lands as are to be cleared off, at the rate of one shade tree to every two acres, and occasionally a clump of shade trees; and in case said Lessees shall destroy, or suffer to be destroyed, any shade trees, they shall pay to the Lessor the sum of ten dollars for each and every shade tree so destroyed, as stipulated damages therefor. And the said Lessees further agree that they will, well and sufficiently repair, and keep in good repair, all the buildings now, or hereafter to be erected on said demised premises, and replace in the windows all glass that shall be broken or missing;

Lessees, are faithfully kept and performed, and for all other lawful purposes,—and the said Lessees hereby further agree and covenant that any former tenant or occupant of the said premises, or any part thereof, may enter upon any part of the said premises, upon which there shall be any crop of wheat or grain growing at the date of this lease, and belonging to such former tenant, and take care of, harvest and carry away the same, and use one half of the barn for securing and threshing the grain that may be so harvested by such former tenant, but for no other purposes, and this lease is executed, and possession of said premises is given to the said Lessees, and is taken by them, subject expressly to the right of such former tenant or occupant herein specified; and it is further agreed, that in any future lease or conveyance of the said premises, the said Lessor shall reserve to the said Lessees a similar right to that last above specified to enter upon the said premises, for the purpose of harvesting any crop of grain put in during the lawful continuance of this lease—and every such future lease and conveyance, shall be subject to the right herein specified—but the liberty of using a part of the barn and of harvesting crops as above described, does not give any right of pasturage, or of making any other use of the fields than taking care of, harvesting and removing the grain, subject to the conditions above mentioned.

ARTICLE 10. [Deliver quiet possession.] The said Lessees further agree, that they will, at the end, or sooner determination of said term, peaceably and quietly yield up to the said Lessor, the possession of said premises, with all the fences and buildings in good repair, and the fences constructed and remaining according to the provisions of article 5; and the farm exhibiting all the indications of a well cultivated farm.—Providing always, and these presents are upon condition, nevertheless, that if the rents herein reserved or any part thereof, be not paid by the times herein mentioned for the payment thereof; or if the said Lessees, or any of their assigns, shall assign, demise, or under-let said premises, or any part thereof, for any time whatever, without the consent in writing of the said Lessor, first had and obtained; or if the said Lessees, shall refuse or neglect to keep and perform any of the covenants and agreements herein contained on the part of the Lessees, that then and in any of the said cases, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said Lessor, into and upon the said demised premises, or any part thereof in the name of the whole, to re-enter, and the same again to have, re-possess, and enjoy, as his or their former estate therein, this agreement or any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding:—And it is hereby agreed that no receipt of rent by the said Lessor, after a breach of any of the covenants or agreements, herein contained on the part of the said Lessees, whether such rent accrued before or after such breach, shall operate as a waiver of such right of re-entry, unless such right be expressly waived in writing, and that in no case, shall it be necessary to give notice to quit said premises, or to demand possession thereof, before commencing proceedings to recover the possession thereof.

ARTICLE 11. [Course of Crops.] Lessees agree in relation to the cultivation of the several fields in the farm hereby leased, to pursue the course of crops and husbandry indicated in a bill of rent endorsed hereon, and also to put the following described fields, and no others into fall crops:—

Lot No 7 containing about 23 a.c. all of which is to be mowed a few cuts in

Articles Supplemental.

Since as is before stated attention to the provisions of this lease in relation to bushes, weeds, Canada thistle, and keeping fences and buildings in good repair. They may build a new fence across the South pasture on the line run by Mr. Leary, & also a new fence through the middle of the 80 acres lot, separating the wheat from the stubble, getting out new rails for that purpose, for which it will done, this are to be allowed. Wadsworth Deeds 15 volumes are on shelf 46, unwrapped or in boxes J46A, J46B, and J46C. Most are indexed. All copies are from County Court House records. Western New York originally was one county called Ontario from which land west of the river was split off into a Genesee County. About 1820 Ontario and Genesee were split into Counties that we know today. Supposedly copies of deeds were given to each new county as it was formed for the lots that it contained. The Wadsworths found it convenient to have their own copies in the land offices. Deeds and related records for Genesee are to be found in Book 44 and others marked with *.

Wadsworth Letters

Core Collection: Boxes L1 - L 53
Shelves 15 - 23
Arranged in order by date
Years 1837-1917

These letters concern the business and home life of the occupants of the Homestead at the south end of Main Street. Until the death of William Wolcott Wadsworth in 1852 they were more descriptive and anecdotal. After that the collection was kept up by the designated clerks and agents and contains fewer personal or family letters. The later letters refer mostly to business expenses. The first twenty boxes are provided with calendars for each folder. Of special interest to historians are Elizabeth Wadsworth's letters to her brother William Wolcott Wadsworth describing life in Geneseo while he was away from home. As mentioned above, letters before 1837 can be found on the microfilm from the Library of Congress. Also note the first letter book in the following section for 1815 to 1819.

Wadsworth Letter Books

Letter books were the nineteenth century method for keeping copies of letters that one wrote to friends or for business matters. There was no carbon paper or photo copying device to duplicate and preserve such information. With some overlap and some gaps in coverage, the following books are in chronological order.

Book #61, James Wadsworth (1768-1844). Letters from 1815 to 1819, Shelf 27. Information about Merino sheep, the wool business, wheat, trade with Great Britain, the cold summer of 1816, and social issues (education, libraries, religion, newspapers) which interested James. Indexed

Book #58, William Wolcott Wadsworth (1810-1852). Letters from the late 1830's, Shelf 27. Information about Ohio and Michigan land accounts. Indexed

J. S. Wadsworth Letter Book. James S. Wadsworth (1807-1864). Letters from 1836 to 1842, Shelf 27. Information about family lands in Ohio and Michigan, the Treaty of 1838 with the Seneca Indians Chiefs concerning sale of Reservation lands in New York State and Indian emigration, and other family business. Indexed

William Wolcott Wadsworth Estate Letter Book. Letters from 1847 to 1863, Shelf 27. Concerning estate business matters. Separate Index volume.

Estate of James Wadsworth Letter Books. Volume 1, letters from 1850 to 1855. Volume 2, letters from 1855 to 1863. Both on Shelf 46. Concerning estate business matters. Kept by James S. Wadsworth and his clerk Edward R. Hammatt. Indexed

WADSWORTH MAPS

Most of the Wadsworth maps are manuscript maps drawn by surveyors or copied from other originals for the use of the family. They are seldom dated, but from the internal evidence, some date back to before 1800. This is especially true of the tract maps for both the Holland Purchase and the Phelps and Gorham's Purchase. The names of settlers, who leased or bought the lots has been written on most of the maps, and they are a good place to start a search for family residence in western New York. Following is a list of multiple or single lot maps by Township, Tract, County or Indian Reservation in the two collections.

Vouchers

Wadsworth Vouchers Bills, Receipts, etc. from the Homestead Office

Core collection: Boxes V1 - V46
Shelves 27 - 35
1838 - 1917
Office and Household Bills
Organized by date

The strength of this collection lies in the fact that it gives a picture of the tastes and life of one of the area's most important families over a century that spanned the time from frontier life to the industrial revolution and beyond. It is also a graphic illustration of the history of business printing and practices in the United States. As with the letters, more personal expenses gradually disappeared, perhaps because of the crises that the family experienced, or that they were not later kept by the office clerk. When Emmeline and son William Austin returned to live in the Homestead, personal vouchers were boxed separately. See below.
